Consider Revising Disability Pension Policy For Ex-Army Men To Prevent Misuse Through Belated Claims : Supreme Court Tells Union: Key points

Expressing concerns over delayed claims for disability pensions by ex-army men, the Supreme Court today (July 15) asked the Union to consider revising its Policy to ensure there is no misuse of the law.

Issue

The Supreme Court examined whether the existing disability pension policy for ex-servicemen is being misused through delayed claims and whether the Government's blanket challenges to Armed Forces Tribunal (AFT) orders granting such pensions are justified. The case raised the need for a balanced and revised policy that prevents misuse while safeguarding genuine entitlements.

Factual Background

- The Union of India challenged a Delhi High Court judgment which upheld orders of the AFT, granting disability pension to two ex-army personnel.
- The claims were filed years after retirement, prompting the Union to argue that such delayed claims amount to an abuse of process.
- The Supreme Court Bench of Justice PS Narasimha and Justice AS Chandurkar heard the Union's plea in a batch of similar matters, reflecting systemic concerns over the existing framework.

Reasoning and Observations.

- Justice Narasimha noted the large number of delayed disability pension claims, some filed 15–20 years post-service, and questioned the efficacy and vulnerability of the current policy.
- He informed that the Attorney General had been asked to review the disability pension scheme in light of these concerns.
- The Court observed that even in genuine hardship cases (e.g., postings in Siachen), the Union often contests AFT awards, indicating a policy-level deficiency.
- The Solicitor General (SG) Tushar Mehta acknowledged the issue, stating a meeting with the Defence Secretary had been held and requested the Court to suggest parameters.
- The Court, however, declined to lay down guidelines, emphasizing:
- “It's your policy. Why should we lay down? We will not even touch it.”
- The Bench encouraged the Union to frame a new policy that prevents misuse but also avoids unnecessary litigation against genuine claimants.
- The SG agreed to present data showing instances of abuse, while affirming that deserving veterans must not suffer.

Conclusion

The Supreme Court expressed serious concern over the growing litigation surrounding disability pensions and urged the Union Government to revamp the policy framework. The matter has been tagged with similar petitions and will be heard after four weeks. The Court stressed the importance of balancing public finance discipline with honouring the service of veterans.
